Liz Magor: Molly's Reach, 2005, polymerized gypsum, polyurethane foam, 34 x 42 x 1127 cm

The main gallery will feature a sculpture cast from a 27 foot beach log divided into sections. The spaces between each piece reveal an unexpected and impossible interior. Of the piece Magor says, "The image of the log is there as a skin or a sheath or a long tube or pipe, making a form which is available to contain something other than wood. Its convincing resemblance to a weather beaten log continues to conjure solidity even though all evidence is to the contrary."
